

Assessment Letter Criteria

Your letter is written for a parent audience. You explain your assessment practices including formative assessment methods, summative assessments, and standardized tests (the what and the how). You justify your assessment methods (the why). You establish clear links between what you do, why you do it, and the impact of your assessment approach on student achievement.